Lambda Award-winning author Farzana Doctor's acclaimed novel, All Inclusive, to release in U.S. this summer

"This is brilliant storytelling." — Terry Fallis, author of The Best Laid Plans

Ameera does her best to keep her nights at a Mexican resort's swingers' scene as separate as possible from her day job at that same resort. But rumours have begun to swirl, and her job is on the line. And now her father, who abandoned her without a trace, is trying to get in touch — from the afterlife.

Upon its release in Canada in 2015, All Inclusive was met with critical acclaim. The Globe and Mail calls it "an ambitious, thematically voracious novel on love and the wounds we didn't know we had." Literary Review of Canada also describes Doctor as "a deliciously evocative writer." The novel was additionally named a Kobo Best Book of the Year.

Farzana Doctor is one of CBC Books' Ten Canadian Women Writers You Need to Read Now and the recipient of the Writers' Trust of Canada's Dayne Ogilvie Grant. She was named NOW Magazine's Best Author, beating Canadian icon Margaret Atwood for the title. Farzana lives in Toronto.

Key Points:

- The anticipated follow-up to Six Metres of Pavement, winner of the 2012 Lambda Literary Award and the 2017 One Book One Brampton winner
- Highlights non-monogamous/polyamorous sexuality and LGBT issues
- Culturally diverse — most of the featured characters are people of colour (primarily Indian and Mexican)
- Storyline prominently features Air India bombing of 1985
